

Conversion Of A Twin Housing Unit to An Office Building, 1990

The renovation of these old, neglected adjoining units including modifications necessary to fulfil the functions needed by a factoring firm had to be executed within certain limitations required by the Municipality. The building, the design and the application of which was completed within a short period of two months had to be supported with steel structures in order to achieve open space for new functions. The windows which did not have a regular pattern were organized to create a balanced distribution on the façade. Also, a triangular entrance was designed to emphasize this part of the building.
